THAT TABBY'S TRICK SURE WORKED SLICK FOR US, EH, TYKE?

Zipping past Farmer Barnes's orchard, one morning, Bertie Bird and Chippy Sparrow were suddenly startled by the angry, raucous caws of a crow and the frightened shrieks of a sparrow.

"What's up?" cried Bertie. "A fight?"

"Must be," agreed Chippy. "And that sparrow sounds like my Aunt Sassy. Come on! She may need help!"

Off the two sped in the direction of the noise. And, sure enough, in one of the peach trees, they found a young crow trying to chase Aunt Sassy off her nest. Two more crows were busily gobbling up Farmer Barnes's peaches.

"Hey, you!" Bertie screamed angrily at the crows. "Get out of that tree!"

"Make us!" one of the crows challenged.

"All right! We will!" yelled Chippy.

And he and Bertie really tried.

The brave little birds put up a good fight. But, it seemed, they were fighting a losing battle until Farmer Barnes rushed up with his shotgun.

The crows, frightened at sight of the gun, screamed out their raspy CAWS and sped away in panic.

Not realizing it was the gun that really had frightened the crows, Bertie and Chippy took all the credit for routing them.

"There!" said Bertie to Aunty Sassy. "You're safe, now! We've chased those mean old crows away."

"Oh, thank you!" cried Aunt Sassy, gratefully. "You and Chippy are very brave." And back she flew to her babies.

Feeling pretty proud of themselves, Bertie and Chippy flew happily on. Then they heard Aunt Sassy screaming for help again.

"Well, cheeperee!" cried Chippy. "What's the matter now?" Whirling around, they sped back to the peach tree.

"Eeek!" squealed Bertie. "Look who's squatting on that branch!"

Chippy looked. "Erk!" he squawked. "It's a hoot owl! Let's fly!"

"Don't be silly!" said Bertie. "We can chase him away. We chased those big fierce crows, didn't we?"

So they hurled themselves at Mister Hoot Owl and just barely managed to knock him off his perch to the ground. The big owl looked like he was playing dead.

"See!" said Bertie. "I told you we could do it."

Chippy was much too surprised to say anything at all! Aunty Sassy was surprised, too. "Why, goodness gracious!" she cried. "You've knocked him out! I never would have believed it possible. I must tell my babies." And she darted up into the tree.

"Chee!" said Bertie, as the two little birds strutted cockily around their vanquished foe. "We're pretty good!"

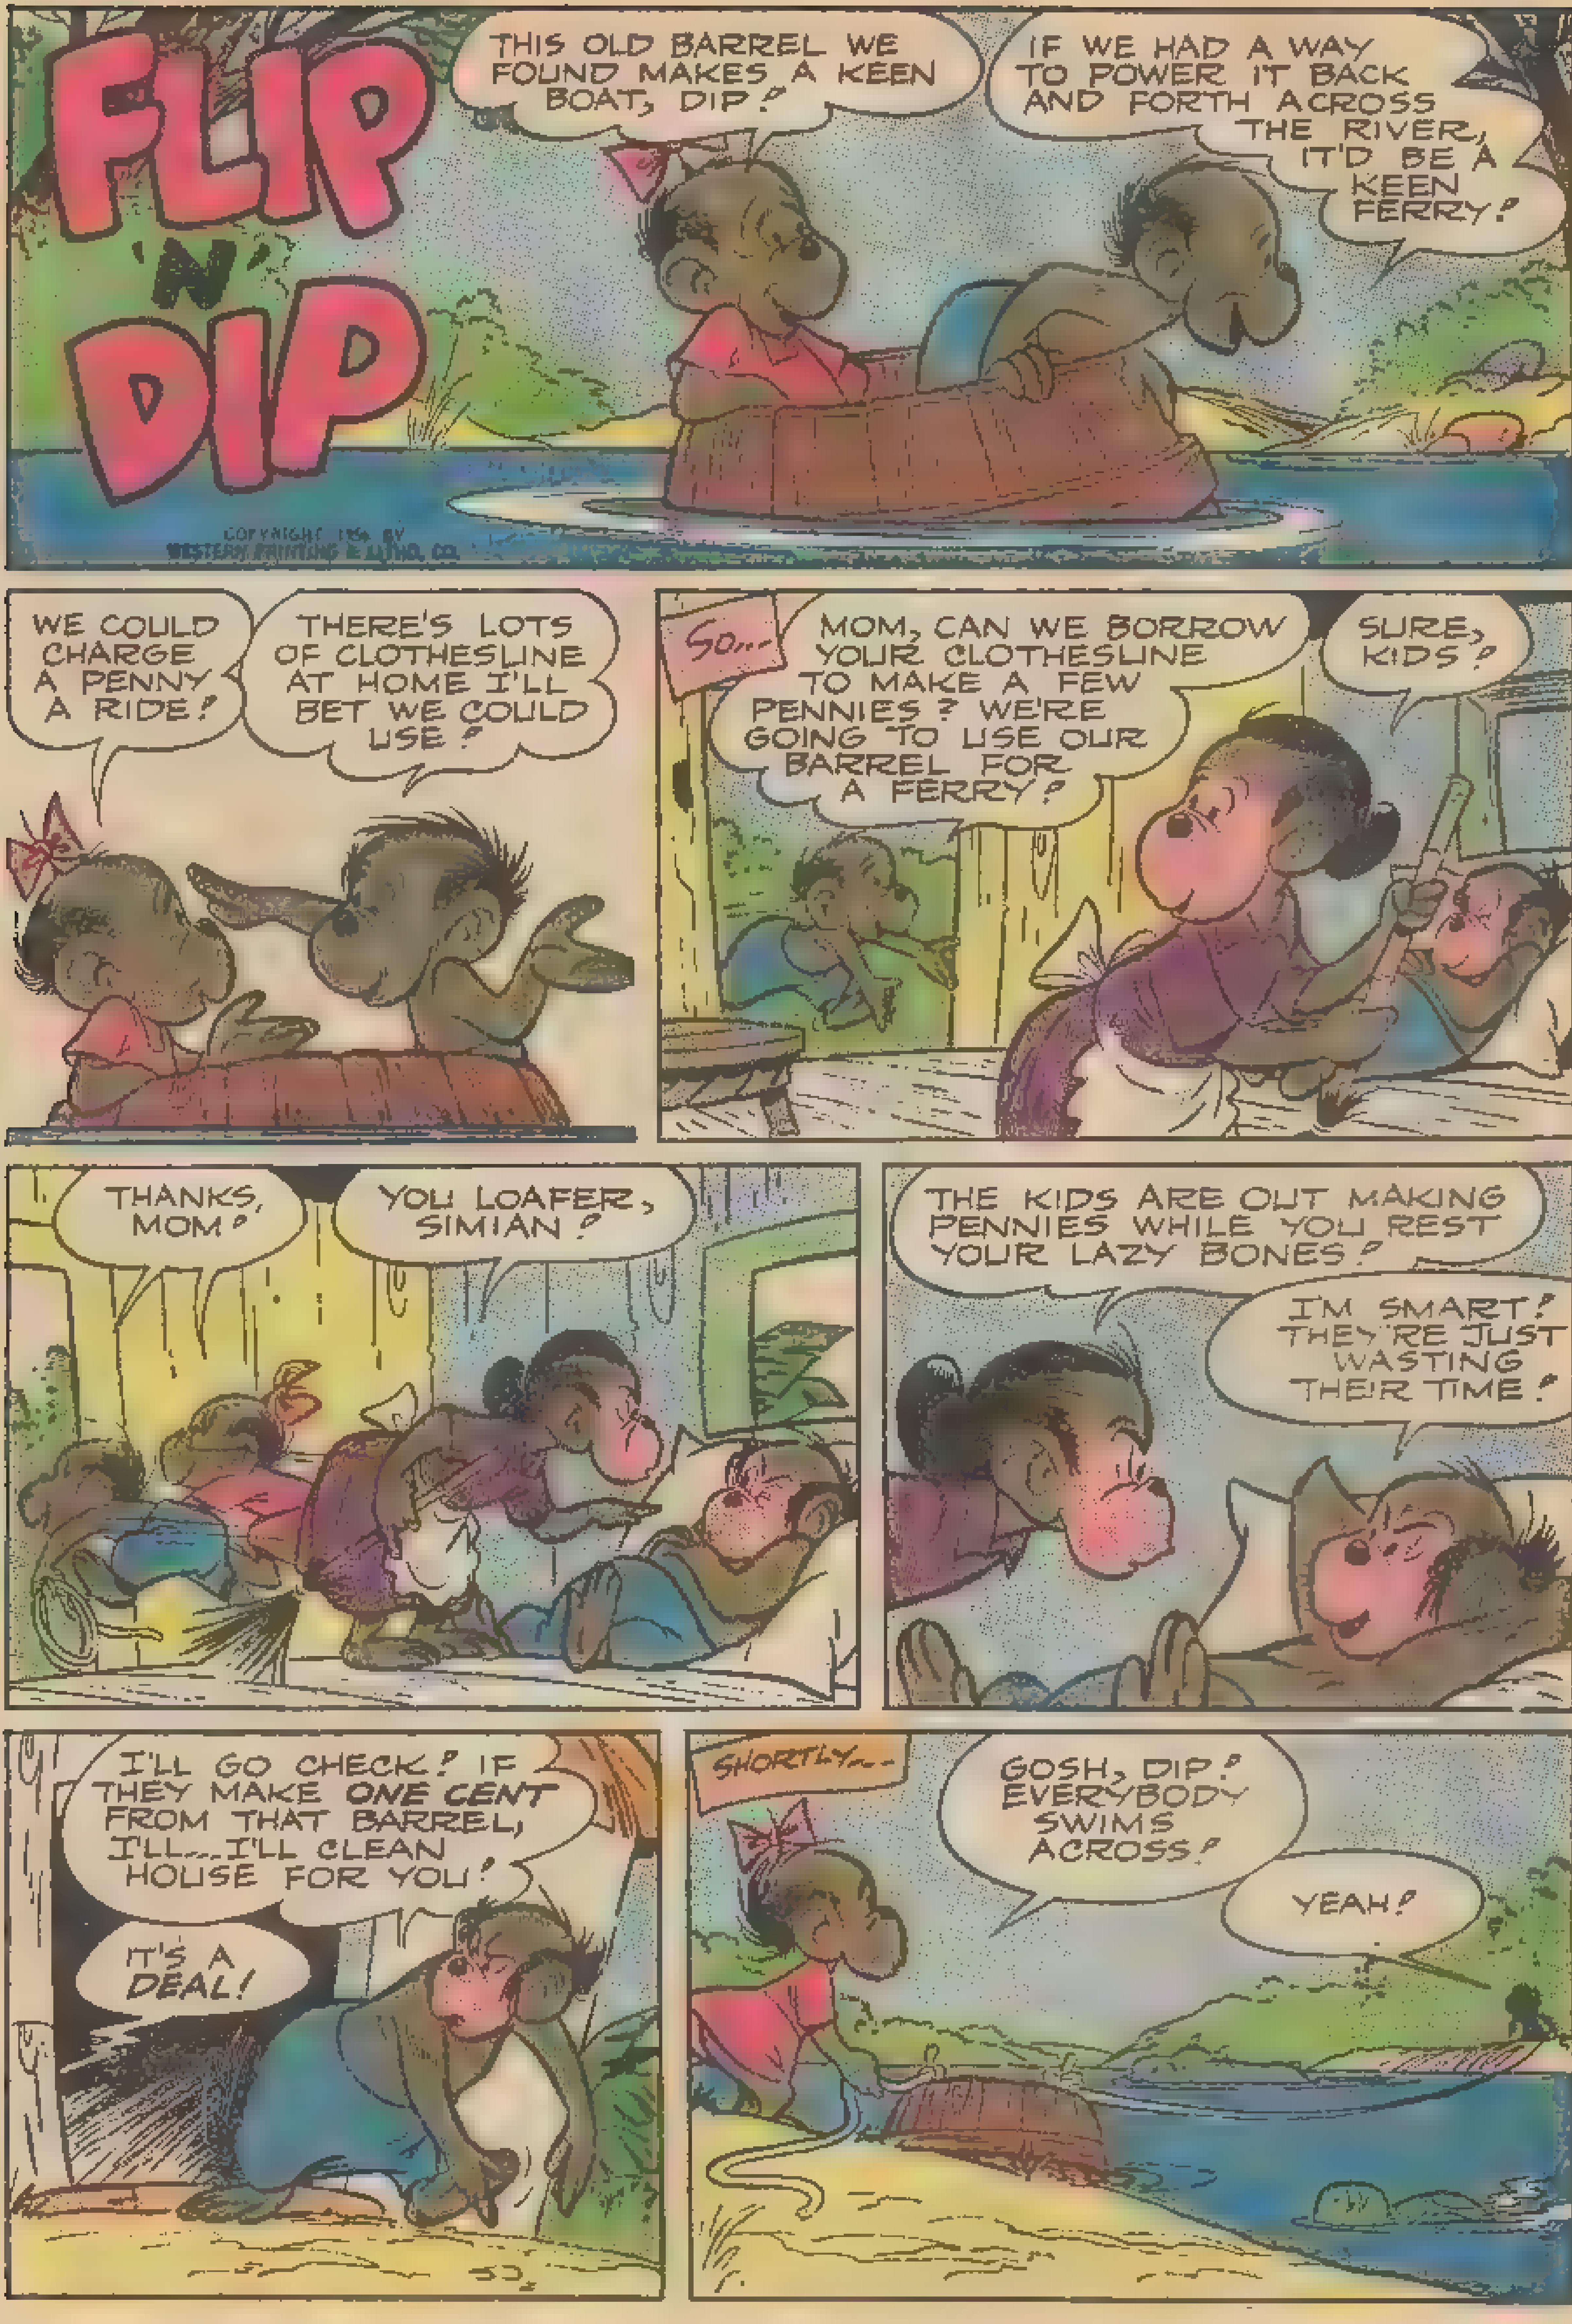

"Good!" exclaimed Chippy. "We're so good, we even surprise ourselves!"

At that moment, Farmer Barnes rushed up again. "Get away from my stuffed owl, you little terrors! I put it in the tree to scare the crows away!"

Bertie, thinking Farmer Barnes was thanking them, chirped back, "You're welcome! Just whistle any time you want crows and owls chased out of your peach tree. We'll come flying!"

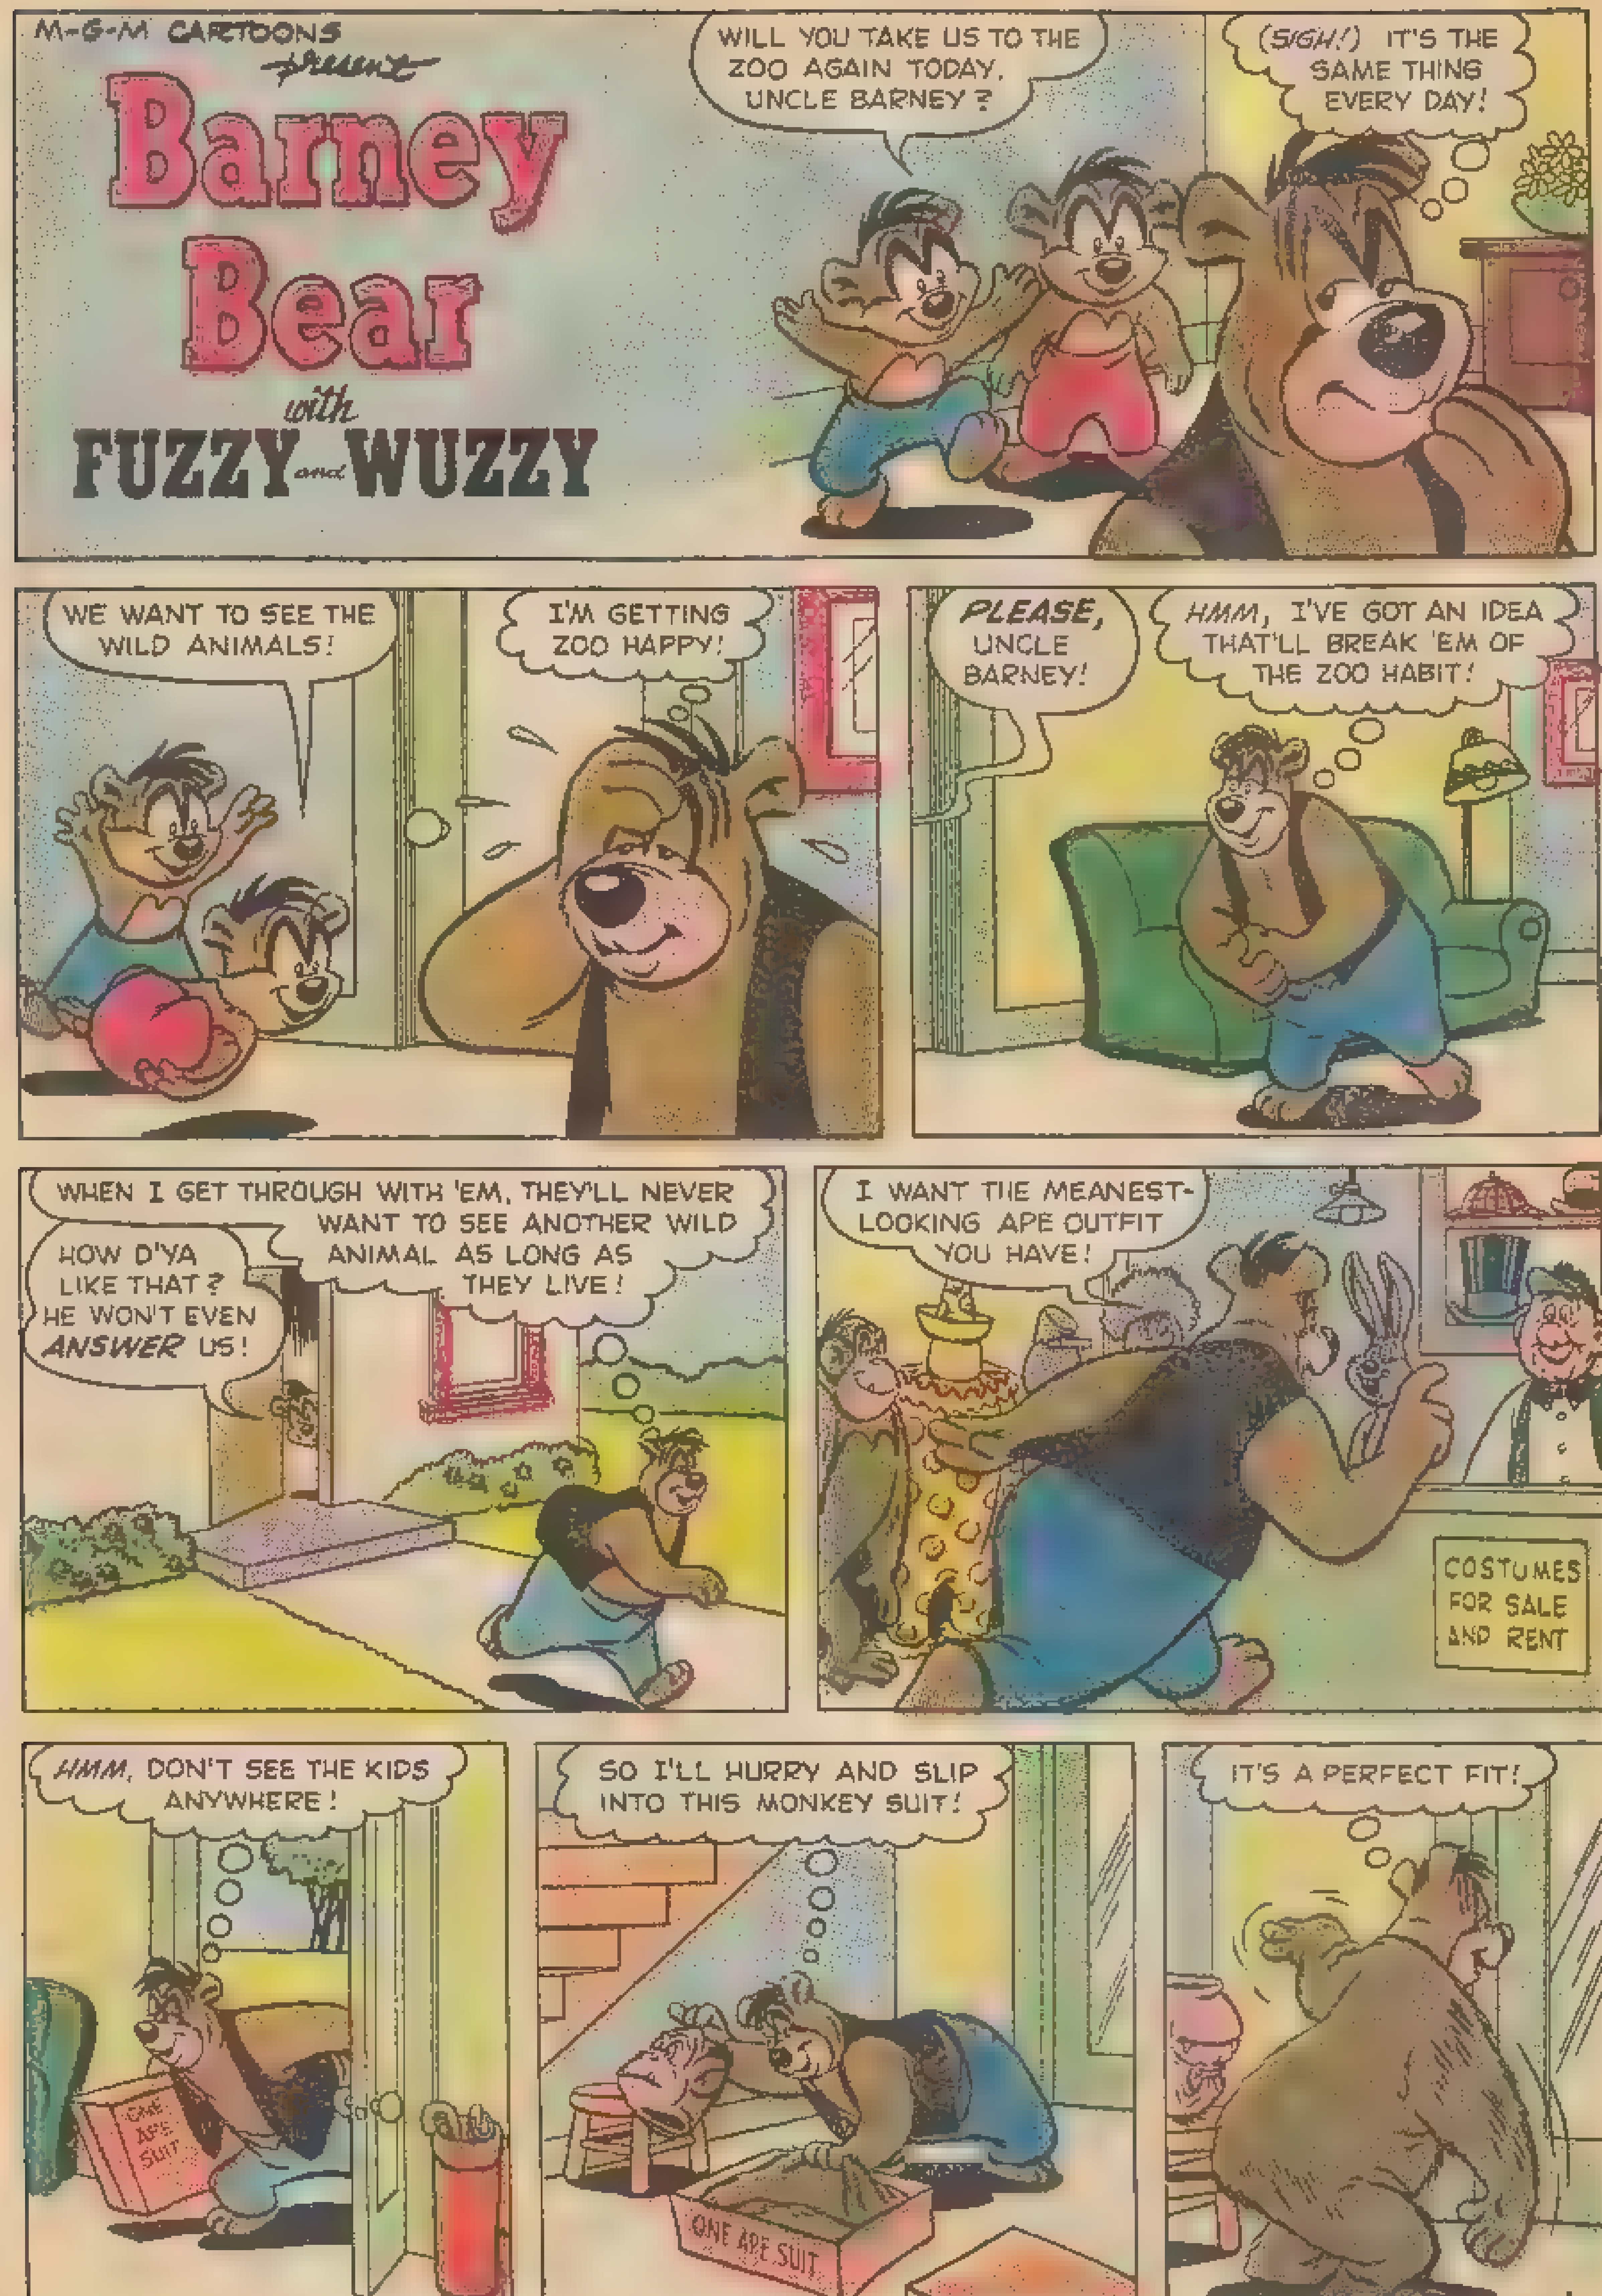

And with a happy "Cheerio!" the two questionable little heroes flew away, leaving Farmer Barnes gazing after them, scratching his head in befuddlement.
